

63
EuATOMIC MASS 151.964STATE SolidDISCOVERY 1901 (Eugène-Anatole Demarçay)The yellowish metal goes black when exposed to air.

Samarium

62
Sm

The small but powerful electric motors that power some electric aircraft use samarium magnets. Samarium is also used in some lasers and in nuclear reactors.

Laboratory sample of pure samarium*ATOMIC MASS 150.36STATE SolidDISCOVERY 1879 (Paul-Émile Lecoq de Boisbaudran)

Gadolinium

64
Gd

The Finnish chemist Johann Gadolin inspired the names of this lanthanide and its ore, gadolinite. Gadolinium tarnishes quickly when in contact with air.

ATOMIC MASS 157.25STATE SolidDISCOVERY 1880 (Jean Charles Galissard de Marignac)Laboratory sample of pure gadolinium