

CENTRAL COLUMN

The vertebrae form the "tower" of the spinal column. This is not only the body's central support structure; it also flexes and bends to move the head and torso at different angles.