

- Contraceptive implant: see your doctor to have it removed.
- IUD or IUS (intrauterine device or intrauterine system): visit your doctor without delay if you're using either since there's a 6 percent risk that the pregnancy could be ectopic. Even if a scan shows that the pregnancy is not ectopic, the IUD or IUS should be removed because there is a 50–60 percent chance of miscarriage. After 12 weeks of pregnancy, the device should not be removed since this could trigger a miscarriage.
- Contraceptive injection (Depo-Provera): see your doctor if you conceive while using this. Research indicates that it won't affect the unborn baby, but you should not have any more injections.
- Morning-after pill: once an egg has implanted, the morning-after pill has no effect. Do, however, see your doctor if you're concerned.
