

- Discuss support and access with your baby's father (if appropriate), and if you can't agree, seek legal advice. You and your baby will benefit if an amicable arrangement is reached, and the sooner you start talking, the easier it will be.
- Arrange support for after the birth. A survey found that grandparents who are actively involved in their grandchildren's lives contribute positively to their well-being. If you don't have family close by, try to build a network of other support that will see you through the early weeks.
- Start thinking early about your career options for after the birth. You don't have to make any decisions, but it helps to know some of the choices you may have to make later.
