

Should I stop adding salt to my food during pregnancy? No, but do stick to the recommended daily allowance of salt, which is 6g a day. To do this, avoid eating processed foods and sauces and, instead, get the salt you need from healthy snacks and homemade food. Most people consume too much salt and a lot of it comes from foods such as breads and chips, as well as prepared meals, sauces, pizza, and cured foods such as ham and bacon.
