

All your baby's organs, limbs, and facial features are in place, but their head is still disproportionately large. They can open and close their mouth; their eyes are developing behind closed lids.