

best to avoid them while you're pregnant, including herbal teas. Decaffeinated black teas are your best bet, but if you want a fruit or ginger tea, read the ingredient label on the package carefully to be sure that no herbs are present. If you want to use an herbal remedy, talk to your doctor first.

Infections during pregnancy

When you're pregnant, your immune system is slightly suppressed. This is necessary to stop you from rejecting the baby. This means that you may be slightly more susceptible to colds, coughs, sore throat, or food poisoning, and the illness may last longer.