

You can't have too much of a good thing with vitamin C since excess is passed in urine. However, vitamins don't behave in the same way when taken as a supplement, so don't exceed 2 g a day of vitamin C in supplement form.

Vitamin C helps your body absorb iron from food, so have a glass of citrus juice or tomatoes with meals. It is easily destroyed, however, so to minimize losses cut vegetables into large pieces before cooking them, use minimal water, and serve as soon as possible. Steaming or microwaving will preserve vitamin C. Leftover vegetables retain little vitamin C, so just cook the amount you need.

Can I continue jogging? There's no reason why not if you were a regular runner before you became pregnant, but take it easy—now is not the time to run a marathon!

You need to avoid becoming overheated so don't run on hot days and drink plenty of water, regardless of the temperature. Wear sports gear that supports your growing breasts and belly. Try to run on soft surfaces, such as grass, to reduce the stress on your joints, especially your knees.
