

inhalation, and cross the placenta. No hard evidence shows that this has an ill effect, but it makes sense to minimize the chances of chemicals reaching the baby.

When using products, wear rubber gloves to prevent skin contact and ventilate rooms. To avoid inhaling mists or vapors, choose nonaerosol products. Also, choose products recommended for their low environmental impact, which contain fewer chemicals. Where possible, use natural alternatives to chemicals.