

Ultrasound scans reveal a huge range of movement in between inactive periods. You will probably not be able to feel your baby move yet, but they are incredibly active inside your uterus. Somersaults and stretches are part of their daily routine, as are thumb and toe sucking. Your baby moves when awake and asleep; they have no control over their movements at this stage.