

The eyebrows have thickened and are clearly visible.

Tooth buds, for both the baby teeth and the underlying permanent teeth, are now in place under the gums.

The baby's body has a covering of fine hair, called lanugo hair. Most of this hair disappears before birth, although it may still be present in very premature babies.

Abdominal organs, including the stomach, intestines, and liver, are fully enclosed within the abdominal cavity.

The spine is now quite straight. Your 20-week scan will reveal each vertebra.

At 20 weeks the average crown to heel length is 10 in (25.4 cm) and the average weight is 10.6 oz (300 g).
