

Your baby's veins will become less visible as she gains a layer of fat beneath the skin, making it less transparent than it was in the earlier stages of pregnancy.

ASK A MOM

Should we tell people the name that we've chosen? I would advise you not to. We told people at first and found it upsetting to find we had so many negative reactions. People freely told us how they had negative associations with the name or that they knew a cat or gerbil called that—a fact that we didn't need to know! Older relatives told us it was “odd” and went on to give us a list of alternatives.
