

The eyelids are fully open this week. Your baby responds to bright light, although he cannot focus, and he can blink.

The baby is taking up a lot of space in the uterus and there is less amniotic fluid surrounding him.

The baby kicks often and a large kick against your ribs may take your breath away.

A boy baby's testes often descend fully into the scrotum around about now. However, in some babies, the testes remain in the pelvic cavity until after birth.

At 27 weeks the average crown to heel length is 14.4 in (36.6 cm) and the average weight is 1.9 lb (875 g).