

for growth.

To check that the babies are growing normally, you will have regular growth scans. From around 28–29 weeks, the growth of twins and other multiples slows down compared with that of singletons. They do, however, still move and kick as much as possible, cushioned by amniotic fluid, which continues to increase in volume until 36 weeks.

