

My partner and I had sex last night and this morning I noticed a small amount of fresh bleeding. Is this anything to worry about? Post-coital bleeding is common in pregnancy and usually nothing to worry about, as long as you are not having any cramping or abdominal pain and your baby is moving.

However, you should notify your doctor and explain what happened as you may need an examine to confirm the source of the bleeding.