

High pressure at
start of heart
pumping cycle

Reduced pressure
at end of heart
cycle

A normal Doppler reading shows the continuous blood flow to the baby via the placenta. At the beginning of a heart cycle, the pressure is high; it then dips at the end of the cycle, but doesn't ever stop.