

ASK A DOCTOR

I've seen a secondhand car seat advertised. Is there any reason why I shouldn't buy it? Don't use a secondhand car seat unless you can be absolutely certain of its history because it may have been in an accident or damaged.

If you must use a secondhand seat, only accept one if you are absolutely certain that you know its history and that it hasn't been in a bad accident. Don't use a seat that cracked, that doesn't come with the original instructions, is missing parts, was recalled, or is too old. Don't purchase a car seat for your baby at a secondhand store or through classified ads, or on the internet.