

Focusing on your birth preferences helps you to consider your options and feel mentally prepared for labor.

HOME BIRTH

In the United States, the number of home births rose by 22 percent in 2019–2020 to more than 40,000. Approximately 1.3 percent of all births in the US occur at home. Although having your baby at home can certainly be appealing, it is associated with two times the risk of perinatal death, and three times the risk of neonatal seizures than planned hospital births.