

Your baby will respond to your voice, to music, and may even jump at unexpected noises (see Talking to your baby); it's impossible to say whether this is because these noises are enjoyed or because they're irritating.

Your baby will also hiccup sometimes and you have a better chance of feeling them moving while they are hiccuping than during any other form of movement. This is because hiccups occur over prolonged periods of time, while kicks and punches can be fairly random.
