

Your 32nd week

YOUR MIDWIFE WILL BE MONITORING YOUR BABY'S POSITION IN THE UTERUS.

The baby has not settled into their final birth position just yet, but an assessment of how they're lying will be made at every routine checkup. There's still room in the uterus for your baby to exercise their limbs and they're getting much stronger and more active. You'll know all about it! As your belly gets bigger, it may become more difficult to be very active and to get comfortable when you're sitting or lying down.
