

Your 34th week

YOUR BABY IS ALMOST FULLY EQUIPPED FOR THE OUTSIDE WORLD.

If your baby was born this week, they'd still need some help with breathing and feeding. But it's reassuring to know that basically they're in pretty good shape for survival. However, you are unlikely to go into labor this early. Now is your chance to start practicing the relaxation and pain-relieving exercises that you've been learning at your prenatal classes. The more familiar you are with the techniques, the more they will help you during labor.
