

The baby has less room to maneuver and will have periods when he is very quiet, but you will feel some movements every day, and he can still manage some strong kicks.

The lungs are filled with fluid, which will disappear when the baby takes his first breath.

By practicing suckling movements, the baby is teaching himself how to feed when he is born.

The pupils of the eyes now dilate in response to light filtering into the uterus.

At 35 weeks the average crown to heel length is 18.2 in (46.2 cm) and the average weight is 5.3 lb (2.4 kg).