

The eyes are large and well formed, although the neural networks are not yet sophisticated enough for the baby to focus. Vision in newborns remains poor for a few weeks after birth while the eyes continue to develop.

Breathing is now rhythmical, with your baby making around 40 breathing movements every minute.

The head may be covered with hair, a few wispy strands—or no hair at all.

The baby is so low down in your pelvis that you have probably exchanged discomfort in your upper abdominal area for pressure on your bladder.

At 39 weeks the average crown to heel length is 20 in (50.7 cm) and the average weight is 7.3 lb (3.3 kg).
