

If the fetal monitoring shows signs that the baby is in distress, then the nurse may change your position, stop the oxytocin, and ask your obstetrician to evaluate you. If the changes in your baby's heart rate continue and cannot be corrected, then your doctor may recommend a Cesarean section.