

An upright squatting position is good for pushing and can be adopted if you have firm support from your partner. He can support you under the arms while you put your hands around the back of his neck.

SUPPORT IN THE SECOND STAGE

In the second stage, your birth partner's support is invaluable. Their role is to make you feel supported and safe and to offer lots of encouragement.