

Your baby's neck will extend backward as the head is delivered and your baby will turn to one side to aid the delivery of the first shoulder.

Once both shoulders are safely delivered, the rest of your baby's body will slip out fairly quickly.