

With forceps, your baby's head is cradled on either side with metal tongs that guide him down in time with your contractions.