

Spinal cord

The spinal cord carries the signals that help control the body. It is a bundle of billions of neurons that stretches down the back from the brain. About the width of a finger, it connects the brain to the rest of the body.

