

Enjoying flavors

Our senses of taste and smell work together and allow us to enjoy flavors. The pleasure we get from different flavors encourages us to eat and provide fuel for the body.

FIVE TASTES

Sweet foods, such as cakes and fruits, are packed with energy.

Sour foods, such as citrus fruits, have a sharp, acid taste.

Salt occurs naturally in food—adding a lot more is bad for our health.

Bitter foods such as coffee often taste unpleasant to children.

Umami is the savory taste found in grilled meats and cheese.
