

Osteons give strength to compact bone

Yellow bone marrow filling is a fat store

Bone shaft connects the two ends of the bone

This microscopic section shows the osteons that run the length of the bone and make up the hard layer of compact bone.

Red bone marrow, shown here in blue, is a soft tissue that fills the spaces between the struts in spongy bone. It produces billions of blood cells every day to replace the ones that wear out.