

Pivot joint

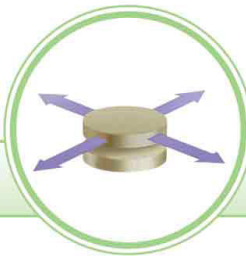

at the top of the backbone allows the head to turn from side to side.

Ball-and-socket joint in the hips and shoulders allows movement in most directions.

Hinge joint in the knees and elbows lets the legs and arms bend and straighten.

Plane joint between short bones with flat ends, such as the ankle and wrist bones, only allows small gliding movements.