

The cell membrane forms the cell's outer layer

Mitochondria are the cell's powerhouses. They release energy, which is used to power the cell's activities.

Endoplasmic reticulum stores and transports proteins that are made by tiny ribosomes (shown as purple dots) on its surface.

Microtubules are rods that support and shape the cell