

Chew and swallow

The mouth is the first part of the digestive tract. Here, chunks of food are chewed and crushed by the teeth into pieces small enough to be pushed into the throat by the tongue, and swallowed.

Mouth and throat

The mouth contains the teeth and tongue. During chewing, the tongue mixes the food with slimy saliva released by salivary glands. The resulting slippery ball of food is then swallowed.

