

UNDER AIR ATTACK

A Japanese cruiser takes evasive action at the Battle of Leyte Gulf. The vulnerability of large warships to air strikes was a shock to all navies in World War II, requiring changes in tactics and making carriers the most important ships.

