South America

Chile was freed from Spanish rule in 1818, largely through the efforts of José de San Martín, leader of the Army of the Andes.

Adopted in 1817, after San Martín's victory at Chacabuco, the national flag of Chile was preceded by at least two other versions during the early years of separatism. The current flag was based on the Stars and Stripes.

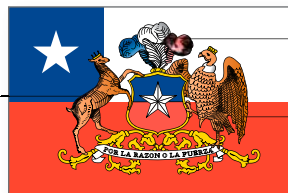

The white star was reserved for use only on the official flag until 1864, when the starred flag was made official for all purposes.

THE PRESIDENT'S STANDARD

The flag of the President is the same as the national flag, with the national arms in the center. The coat of arms dates from 1834. It is supported by an huemal deer and a condor. The crest is formed from the feathers of the rhea bird. The motto—"Por La Razon o La Fuerza"—means "By reason or by force."
