

horns confirm demonic identity

hair accentuates
wild movement

light coloring denotes an aristocrat

gaping mouth and demonic teeth

Theater mask
Edo period
This mask represents Hannya, a female Noh character turned into a demon by jealousy and anger. Noh theater coexisted with other forms, such as Kabuki.

Brocade picture
18th century
Entitled Truth-Sincerity, this is one of the nishiki-e (brocade pictures) of Suzuki Harunobu (c. 1725–70), made by superimposing printings of woodblocks inked with a range of colors.

Writing tools
1800–1899
Calligraphy was widely practiced by the well-to-do as a leisure pursuit. The compartments of this box contain brushes and other paraphernalia of the art.

bamboo
brush

wooden cube contains penknife and a needle

three volumes
bound together

grinding
block

ink block

detail drawn from nature

Bound woodblock prints
1779
A monochrome print consists of a single impression from a carved woodblock.
Some later examples were hand-colored,
in anticipation of color printing.