ANXIOUS TO RECOVER ITS LOSSES TO POLAND–LITHUANIA under the Treaty of Deulino of 1619, and exploiting the death of the Polish king, Sigismund III Vasa, Russia besieged Smolensk in October 1632. Polish forces were unable to attempt a lifting of the siege for almost a year. Their ultimate defeat of the Russians in 1634, however, was absolute.

Sweden's success of the previous year in the Thirty Years' War continued with a defeat of the Imperial armies in April 1632 at the Battle of Rain, in Bavaria. A minor triumph in November at the Battle of Lützen, near Leipzig, might then have confirmed Swedish territorial ambitions in Germany had King Gustavus Adolphus not been killed in the battle. At a stroke, the impetus went out of the Protestant campaign. Habsburg supremacy seemed to have been assured.

Battle of Lützen

Similar-sized forces suffered similar casualties at the Battle of Lützen. Critically, though, the Swedes lost their leader, Gustavus Adolphus.

In 1633, Italian astronomer Galileo Galilei (1564–1642) was called before the Roman Inquisition of the Catholic Church. His crime was to support the heliocentric view of the Solar System that placed the Sun, and not the Earth, at its center. He was found guilty of heresy, forced to recant, and spent the rest of his life under house arrest.

Under Japan's Tokugawa shogunate, a policy of kaikin ("sea restriction") was declared in 1633. Contact with the outside world was strictly controlled, although trade with Korea and China was allowed, and the Dutch kept a trading post. The idea was to prevent possible territorial incursions into Japan. It remained official policy until 1853.

The assassination of Field Marshal Albrecht Wallenstein took place at the Pachelbel House, at Eger, Bohemia. He was awoken and killed by his own men.

THE DEFEAT AT LÜTZEN WAS one of the last times that Albrecht Wallenstein (1583–1634) led an Imperial army. Although generally successful, he was distrusted by almost everyone and was believed to be negotiating a separate peace. He was charged with treason by Holy Roman Emperor Ferdinand II, but in February 1634 he was murdered by some of his own officers, with the tacit approval of Ferdinand. Yet, with the Swedes having failed to follow up their victory at Lützen, the initiative returned to the Imperial forces, who crushed the Swedes at the Battle of Nördlingen in November 1634. The subsequent Treaty of Prague, in 1635, made clear the extent of the Habsburg triumph and the Swedish defeat. Germany's Protestant princes now backed Ferdinand II. It provoked the final and most brutal phase of the Thirty Years' War, and direct French intervention.

Battle of Nördlingen

Fought in southern Germany, this battle resulted in a crushing victory for the Habsburgs—but it was not a conclusive end to the war.

As in the 16th century, France feared Habsburg encirclement. Up to now, it had sought to secure itself by financing those states most likely to defeat the Habsburg forces, Sweden above all. With the Swedes on the verge of pulling out of Germany, the French now took the field themselves. As Franco-Swedish armies progressively ravaged Germany, the Swedes gradually reversing their previous losses, so Germany was devastated. The fighting spilled into France when, in 1636, a Spanish army invaded the northeast, briefly threatening Paris, and again, in 1637, when Spain launched an attack on Languedoc in the south. In 1639, France retaliated by invading Catalonia in the northeast of Spain. In this wave of violence, all the participants were by now effectively bankrupt. It was Spain that suffered the most, with attempts at raising revenue provoking bitter resentment, even in Spain itself. In 1640, outright revolt against the Spanish Crown broke out in Catalonia and Portugal, both uprisings openly encouraged by France. In the
