

“IT’S BETTER TO DIE UPON YOUR FEET THAN TO LIVE UPON YOUR KNEES!”

Emiliano Zapata, leader during the Mexican Revolution

Emiliano Zapata was one of the leaders involved in the fight to oust Porfirio Díaz from office and put in place a revolutionary government led by Francisco Madero. Zapata was instrumental in organizing guerrilla troops.

A CENTURY AFTER ITS FIRST REVOLUTION (see 1810), Mexico was once again caught up in the throes of political change. Liberal reformers had begun to resent Porfirio Díaz’s political machine (see 1876) and the Regeneration movement was formed. Members of the group were often jailed, and the publication of their newspaper was suppressed. In 1906, they published a manifesto calling for a one-term presidency and reforms to land—the return of land confiscated by the Díaz regime to its rightful owners—and education. Díaz eventually allowed the development of an opposition, and other groups emerged. However, Díaz jailed one popular presidential candidate, Francisco Madero (1873–1913), on the eve of the 1910 election, reneging on his promise for fair elections. Madero escaped to Texas and began to organize an uprising for November 20, the anniversary of the previous Mexican revolution. It was not a large rebellion, but involved small towns being attacked by pockets of guerrilla groups, which the army was able to suppress. However, by the following year, the revolutionary militias—many of them peasant farmers—led by Francisco “Pancho” Villa (1877–1932) and Emiliano Zapata (1879–1919), stepped up their attacks against the army. Díaz surrendered his office under the Treaty of Ciudad Juarez, and by November 1911 Madero was installed as president. However, he now came in for attacks from the right and the left as groups splintered from the revolutionary movement. This political fighting spilled over into violence, with warfare continuing for decades.

In East Asia, China invaded Tibet once again, trying to assert its claim to rule the territory. This invasion came after British attempts to occupy Lhasa in 1904, which were fueled by fears that Tibet could fall under the influence of Russia. This was followed by a 1907 treaty between China and Britain that recognized China’s sovereignty over Tibet. Tibet did not consider it valid, and the Tibetans were able to use the revolution that began in China the following year (see 1911) as an opportunity to drive out the Chinese.

For nearby Korea, the consequences of the Russo–Japanese war (see 1904) had severe ramifications. It had allowed Japan to use the peninsula for military operations and in the resulting Treaty of Portsmouth, in 1905, Korea was made a Japanese protectorate, and by 1910 had been officially annexed.

6000 THE NUMBER OF DIAMONDS IN GEORGE V’S CROWN

EVENTS IN CHINA TOOK A DRAMATIC TURN AS THE QING DYNASTY—which had been in power for more than 260 years—faced a rebellion. Despite its longevity, many Chinese always considered the ruling Manchus as foreigners. They were also resentful at the growing number of Westerners, who had been permitted to move inland from the port cities. The 20th century had been full of unrest for China (see 1900) and this continued to grow as revolutionary groups began to form around the country. In October, a revolutionary plot was uncovered and the members arrested and executed. Soldiers in Wuchang who knew of the plot decided to push forward with a revolt; they led a mutiny on October 10, which soon spread throughout the country, and the rebels declared China a republic. They were met with little resistance because many officials accepted that the Manchus’ days were numbered. In the US, exiled revolutionary leader Sun Yat-sen (1866–1925) had heard about the events in China and returned home. He was elected provisional president of the country, although prime minister Yuan Shikai (1859–1916) had been given full power by the imperial court. The two struck a deal, although Yuan would try to make himself emperor in 1915; his efforts ended in failure three months before he died in 1916.

Meanwhile, in India, the British were trying to display their colonial might with an enormous darbar, or assembly, in Delhi. This was to mark the visit of King George V and Queen Mary. During the visit, the king announced that the colonial capital would be moved from Calcutta to Delhi. Around the same time, the unpopular policy of partition in Bengal was ended (see 1905), and the territory was reunited. Over the following years,
