

The spices of life

Without spices—the dried seeds, fruits, roots, and bark of plants—our food would be much less tasty. For thousands of years, people have been adding spices to their cooking to flavor, color, and preserve their food. Some spices, such as turmeric and ginger, are used as health remedies, too.