

SHRINKING FOREST Mist rises in the hot air above a mountain rain forest known as the Leuser Ecosystem, on the Indonesian island of Sumatra. Dense with trees pushing up through the rain forest layers, the tallest rise 150–200 ft (45–60 m) to emerge above the canopy. This unique habitat is the last place where Sumatran orangutans, tigers, elephants, and rhinoceroses coexist in the wild.