

A photograph of two llamas resting on a grassy mountain slope. The llama in the foreground is brown and white, looking towards the right. Another white llama is partially visible on the left. The background features steep, forested mountains under a blue sky with some clouds.

WORKING ANIMALS

Llamas are native to South America. The Inca farmed these animals for their meat, milk, and wool. They also used llamas as pack animals to carry heavy loads along mountain trails. Many llamas still live in the Andes Mountains near the ruins of Machu Picchu today.