

Most of the universe is made up of gas, dust, and barren rock, drifting in the vastness of space. But our planet enjoys something very special—the gift of life.

