

About 4,132 miles (6,650 km) long, the Nile is the longest river in the world. It provides a vital water source for nearby farmlands and settlements. Fed by several sources, the Nile flows northward through 10 countries, including Sudan and Egypt, before flowing into the Mediterranean Sea.

