

Seen from space, Earth is a blue planet—the blue of liquid water. Water fills rivers and oceans, swirls through the air as clouds, and falls on the land as life-giving rain.

