BAJI RAO BECOMES PESHWA

At the age of 20, Baji Rao became the seventh Peshwa (prime minister) of the Maratha Confederacy of Hindu warriors. An extraordinary cavalry general, he was undefeated in battle. His tactics, including encircling the enemy quickly and attacking from unexpected directions, kept his enemy off-balance and the Marathas in control of the battlefield. By moving swiftly and living off the land, the Maratha army under his leadership secured a series of conquests that threatened the Mughal Empire.

OTTOMAN TULIP PERIOD

This period saw a flowering of Ottoman arts and culture, with architecture and decoration becoming more elaborate and open to the influence of Western styles, such as Baroque. The period was named after the popularity of the tulip flower at the time, and the frequent use of the tulip motif in design.
