

An Experiment on a Bird in the Air Pump, painted by the English artist Joseph Wright in 1768, offered a vivid metaphor of the Enlightenment, depicting a scene in which a rational investigation of the world literally illuminates, “enlightening” the observers in the room.

