

The Pont du Gard was built in the 1st century CE to carry water over the River Gardon to Nîmes in southern France. The three-arched structure is 275 m (902 ft) in length and is considered to be one of the finest surviving Roman aqueducts.

