

A Northern Song painting depicts a water-powered mill. This was a time of major technological innovation and commerce. Much of the trade was water-borne: it was possible to travel for thousands of kilometres (miles) on a system of inland waterways.

