

DRAG RACING Zooming along a dead straight track, these all-powerful dragsters accelerate all the way to the finish line. They contain massive engines filled with an extra-powerful fuel called nitromethane, which is often shortened to “nitro”. Burning eight times faster than regular petrol used in most cars, this super fuel can push dragsters to speeds in excess of 480 km/h (300 mph).