

LIFE

There is nothing more complex in the entire universe than living things. Life comes in an extraordinarily diverse range of forms—from microscopic bacteria to giant plants and animals. Each organism has specialized ways of keeping its body working, and of interacting with its environment.